Sinopse

A despondent, alcoholic, former writer for the Miami Herald finds himself facedown in a bar in South Beach. A news flash featuring his hometown of Indian Camp Mountain, N.C. catches his eye. Apparently, bigfoot sightings are rampant in the area. In a moment of clarity, he decides to head home to report the story in an effort to reconnect with his roots, resurrect his career, and repair the relationship with his estranged sheriff-father. What he doesn't know is that his friends have concocted a story to help this former award-winning reporter reestablish his career. In the process he reconnects, then disconnects with reality in an hysterical funny, yet dramatic midnight movie that will not be forgotten for a long time after the 71 minutes it captures the viewer. Join award-winning director/writer/actor Bubba Cromer for this first feature movie filmed on location in the Appalachian Mountains. The cast will leave you chuckling as you realize there's very little acting going on here...this is the real McCoy! From Mona Lisa Johnson to Miss Romaine, you'll experience the hilarious and the dramatic in one movie. Bubba has outdone himself in capturing both the flavor of this small mountain town and the mystique surrounding the legend of Bigfoot.
